"Major AIDS Treatment Breakthrough?"

New Inexpensive Oral Alpha Interferon Treatment Sounds Too Good To Be True!

According to a major article by Neenyah Ostrom which appeared in the April 16, 1990 edition of New York Native, astonishing new findings in Kenya have shown immediate reduction—and in most cases, elimination—of symptoms associated with AIDS within two to six weeks using very low doses of orally administered, natural (not recombinant) human alpha-interferon (IFN-alpha). (The findings were originally announced in the April 2, 1990 edition of Biotechnology Newswatch.)

Dr. Davy K. Koech (head of Kenya's Medical Research Institute and director of the clinical trial) presented data from a study of 101 AIDS patients at a meeting in March held in Okayama, Japan which showed that after six to eight weeks of oral administration of low-dose IFN-alpha, 99 of 101 patients in an uncontrolled study were free of all symptoms, including appetite loss, fatigue, fever, mouth sores, fungal infections of the mouth and throat, diarrhea, and swollen lymph nodes.

Koech said that all the patients "had significant increases in CD4 counts" after the IFN-alpha treatment. He also reported that 11 of the 99 patients who responded to the treatment no longer tested seropositive for the AIDS virus.

IFN-alpha was delivered in a maltose lozenge known as "Kemron" that was allowed to dissolve in the mouth for one to minutes once a day. Each dose consisted of only two units of IFN-alpha per kilogram of body weight.

The uncontrolled study was approved by the Kenyan Ministry of Health and the Medical Research Institute's Ethical Review Committee.

The IFN-alpha used in the study was manufactured by the Japanese pharmaceutical company Hayashibara.

The orally-administered IFN-alpha is an extremely inexpensive treatment. In Japan, a three million unit vial of natural IFN-alpha, which produces 30,000 doses, costs only $200 (U.S.).

Lawrence K. Altman also reported Koech's findings in the April 4 New York Times in an article entitled "New AIDS Experiments Stir Hope and Wariness." "Alpha interferon has not generally been tested in pill form because of the belief that the drug would be destroyed by acid in the stomach, and use as a wafer [lozenge] is new, experts said," Altman reports, noting that interferon usually is delivered in high doses by injection. "They said they were at a loss to explain why it might work in wafer form."

A double blind, placebo-controlled study of the efficacy of oral IFN-alpha in the management of AIDS patients will soon begin in Kenya; also, there are reports that various clinics in the United States are gearing up in order to get into the act. Confirmation of the therapy is urgently needed.

"IT'S TIME TO CALL HOME"

The Restoration Church of Jesus Christ (RCJC) announced in San Diego, CA the creation of a new 800-Line Ministry that is designed to reached out to lesbian and gay people throughout the US.

Elder Rand L. Laurent of the Church's Quorum of the Twelve says, "The purpose of this line is to reach out to religiously disenfranchised people who have been rejected from their own denominations for any reason to allow them a place to come home to, with a spiritual family to nurture them."

The 800 line is a 24-hour, 7-day-a-week recorded message line that allows people a way to listen to a prerecorded message concerning the mission of the Church in serving all people and ministering to their needs on a one-to-one basis. Persons calling the line can request further printed information or request a representative of the Church to contact them to answer their questions.

The RCJC differs from many other churches in that sexual orientation is no bar to membership of service. Women, as well as men, are ordained to the Holy Priesthood. And all committed relations where love and mutual respect are found can be joined or "sealed" for time and all eternity in the Temple.

The number is: 1-800-677-RCJC. All are welcome to call.

HOROSCOPES

by Dr. Pat Larr

TAURUS (Apr 20-May 20): Torn between lovers? I could happen to you, and this month it does.

GEMINI (May 21-Jun 20): Love with the proper stranger gets you into a sticky situation with your special someone. Watch out!

CANCER (Jun 21-Jul 22): A new man on the job turns your head. You'll be working a lot more overtime this month.

LEO (Jul 23-Aug 22): A former friend spills the beans about you to your new flame. Don't worry. You'll come out of this smelling like a rose by any other name.

VIRGO (Aug 23-Sep 22): That special someone puts the pressure on you to make a commitment. The stars say it's time to go for it.

LIBRA (Sep 23-Oct 22): Time to unwind with that special someone. A mini-vacation does wonders for your love life. Enjoy!

SCORPIO (Oct 23-Nov 21): An old flame creates a scene in a public place mid-month. Don't let his sour grapes sour you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov 22-Dec 21): That macho man you've had your eye on turns out to be a real lady between the sheets. Throw the bum out.

CAPRICORN (Dec 22-Jan 19): Wake up! That handsome blond who acts like he's too good for you isn't good enough. Look elsewhere for someone more your type.

AQUARIUS (Jan 20-Feb 18): The closer to the streets, the closer to your heart. This month a hunky lost soul turns to you for shelter. Take this puppy home.

PISCES (Feb 19-Mar 20): Look out! Almost everyone you know has their eye on your special someone. The may be the time to decide if you love him or want to let him go.

ARIES (Mar 21-Apr 29): An older man with a sparkle in his eye can't keep his hands off you. Could you be looking for a daddy?

RELATIONSHIPS

by D. Preston Dillon

We are now some three months into the last decade of this century. We are ending a century of devastating wars and great human strides forward toward human freedom. If we don't keep these freedoms, we may not have peace. It is our last decade in which to prepare for a peaceful entry into the 21st century. The fight for personal freedom has taken many lives and continues to do so. Part of our struggle is to find inner peace before we can find peace in our relationships and planetary peace.

Gaia in Olympian tradition was the ancient earth-mother who brought forth the world and the human race from the gaping void, Chaos. Gaia nurtured the living and accepted the dead into her body. She was the earliest possessor of the Delphic oracle. Mortals travelled long distances to consult and give offerings to Gaia as guiding messages arose from the darkness of her earth-womb.

Peace begins within. If we are not at peace with ourselves, it is difficult to be at peace in relationships. There are many distractions, ways to place blame and avoid facing some truths about ourselves. But the sooner we all roll up our sleeves and reclaim our power to create peace, the more we can expect peaceful ways to return.

Ask yourself these questions: If you had just 31 days left to live, what changes would you make? Who is important in your life? If you could change the patterns of your past relationships, what would you want for the future? Do you want the next decade to be anything like the last one? Imagine all the changes that have happened to you over the last ten years . . . the lessons you have learned about loving, giving, receiving, taking, letting go. All relationships that have crossed your path have been valuable in some way as reflections of yourself . . . the parts you love, the parts you hate and parts that have not made themselves known to you yet.

As you reflect on the relationships that have touched your life, relax for a moment and imagine a light cloud surrounding you . . . it brings you an immediate feeling of peace and restfulness. The cloud transports you through time and space back to a sacred and ancient place. You are present at the ritual sight of Gaia the earth goddess. This is a dark and rich place, a very fresh earth. In front of you is one lit candle and below the candle a great book--its pages frayed and brown with age. Eons of humans have marched through time, left a contribution, touched others' lives and moved on. You can sense your own ripple in this sea of humanity. As you approach the book, you notice your name at the top attached to an endless network of lines connecting you to many names. Following down the lines you see friends, lovers, so many people who have somehow touched your life . . . all connecting with each other, all flowing into your name.

In the silence here you can stop for a moment and feel the meaning that each life has brought to your own. Each friend here has been a pool for you to reflect in, to learn who you are, your own purpose and meaning for existence. Some of your experiences have been painful . . . others have given you strength to go on. With this strength in mind, nine candles appear before you, each one awaits your lighting its flame with yours. Stepping forward now, take your candle--your own fire of life--and light the first candle. Receive the energy, peace and love of the person represented by this candle. Lighting the second and third candles, feel the presence of these people who have loved you. Together you bring light to the darkness. Each time repeating their name, breathe in the strength and healing these friends bring to you. A name is a sacred thing. It represents the special qualities that belong to only one person.

Now turn to find nine unlit candles. These candles call to you for forgiveness. Stepping forward with the strength and love you have in your heart, you light the first candle repeating the name of the one who awaits your forgiveness. Repeating the mantra of forgiveness for each of nine beings who have in some way added to your wounds . . .

--forgiveness I ask
--forgiveness I give
--forgiveness brings us peace

Nine times you light, nine times you forgive, and nine times you are forgiven. Each name comes to you clearly now and with each forgiveness you are renewed.

Together you bring light to darkness. And it is done. You are reconfirmed. You are once again reconnected to all beings past, present and those to follow you. All lights burning brightly . . . a great light for world peace. Peace resides within you; it resides in your relationships; it belongs to the world. There is a meadow behind you. This is a safe and peace-filled place to which you can always return to find new lights, heal unresolved pain, or renew visions and purpose. The mist is coming back to enfold you with a sense of peace-filled love. It is a blanket to nurture your heart, you body, and your soul in all that you choose for yourself. As the mist dissipates, you become aware of your current surroundings, the talk, the time.

Relationships give us whatever it is we need for peace. We have to step aside sometimes and honor each relationship without judging its message. Relationships bring us closer to peace. For a moment, linger over what you want the 1990s to be for you, for your relationships, and our mother earth. We all await your flame . . . and when the time comes, Gaia, our earth mother, will receive you into her great womb.

1990 . . . 1 candle for you, 9 candles for those who give you strength, 9 candles for those who caused you pain, 0 the circle, our connection for peace.

Born To Cook

by Chef Luigi

This has recently become one of my favorite one-dish, pasta-supper recipes. Friends really love it because I use spicy Italian sausage. Try it! I know you will agree that once you've had a good Italian sausage down your throat, nothing else will be the same.

Supreme Italian Sausage Pasta

3 Tbs. virgin olive oil
3 cloves of garlic, minced
2 lbs. of hot Italian sausage
2 large peppers, any color combination, whatever is in season.
1 large onion cut into quarter-inch slices
1 can (28 oz.) crushed tomatoes with puree
1/2 cup dry red wine
1 Tbs. dried basil
1 tsp. dried oregano
1 tsp. marjoram
1/2 tsp. dried red pepper (optional)
1 bay leaf
salt and pepper to taste
1 lb. penne pasta or other tubular pasta
grated Parmesan cheese

Place the sausage in a large skillet, fill half way with water, cover, and heat on medium for about 10 minutes, turning half way through. Remove the sausage and discard the water. Into a Dutch oven add the oil over medium heat. Add the garlic and saute about 1 minute or until golden. Cut the sausage into one-inch pieces; I know it's against your religion, but has Chef Luigi ever let you down? Add the cut sausage to the hot oil and cook until lightly browned, about 10 minutes.

While browning your sausage (I just love the term "browning your sausage"; it conjures up such wonderful memories of a time long ago, but that's another story!) cut the peppers into strips and slice the onion. When the sausage is ready, add the onion and peppers stirring while they cook about 5 minutes or until just tender. Add tomatoes in puree along with the red wine, basil, oregano, marjoram, red pepper, and bay leaf. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Cover and simmer about 15 minutes. Uncover the cook for an additional 5 minutes.

Pour the pasta, which you have prepared according to the directions on the package, into the Dutch oven with the sauce and toss. Serve immediately and pass Parmesan separately for the guests to help themselves.

A nice Chianti or Barbera and garlic bread are all that is needed to round out this perfect one-dish meal.

Chef's Note: If you are not into hot Italian sausage, you can forget my number and you can use sweet Italian sausage, or a combination of the two. While the red pepper is optional, without it the dish just isn't the same.

Bush Invites Lesbian and Gay Americans To White House

Lesbian and Gay Americans recently witnessed the signing of the Hate Crimes Statistics Act at the White House. The signing marks the first time in American history that "sexual orientation" has ever been included in a federal law and the first time in history that Lesbian and Gay Americans have ever been invited to a White House bill-signing ceremony.

Eight representatives of the Human Rights Campaign Fund (HRCF), the largest national lesbian and gay political organization attended the ceremony. They were joined by representatives of the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force and Parents and Friends of Lesbian and Gays.

Tim McFeeley, HRCF's Executive Director, praised the President for inviting the groups to participate in the bill signing. "It is a significant step by the President to include Lesbian and Gay Americans at an event of real importance to our community. The President strongly supported this bill, and we appreciate his support. He understands how destructive crimes of bigotry and prejudice—including gay bashing—are to the fabric of American society." McFeeley stated.

"The Hate Crimes Statistics Act has been one of the highest priorities of Lesbian and Gay Americans for several years. The Campaign Fund is proud of the role we played in bringing it into law. Now, we must continue to press the President and the Congress to move on other issues—including adequate funding for AIDS—that are of vital importance to each of us," McFeeley stated.

FAUX PAS

Dear Mr. Kett, My lover of three years and I love to have "three-ways." We've enjoyed many special friends over the years. It's always safe sex, of course. Sometimes I find someone for us to enjoy; sometimes my lover goes on the prowl. Now my lover wants me to have a three-way with someone who's HIV positive. I have my doubts about this, but my lover is all hot for it. What is a gentleman to do? Yours . . . Alvin

Dear Alvin, What is a gentleman to do? Well, first off, are these rumors that your potential partner is infected really proven or is this just bar gossip? Whether or not it's gossip, safe sex is the best sex for you, your partner, and your partner's partner. Enjoy if you wish, but be very careful.

LOVE
(Dedicated To A Paris Memory)

by A.F.

What, my God,
Have you done?
This revelation,
I will not
Survive it.
I sit here,
Alone.
Truth,
Simple truth,
Revealed.
It tears me.

I will love you,
'Til the day
I die.
Hate you for it,
As long
As I live,
The inspiration
Of my being.
Wrong me
A hundred times.
Show me
Publicly, privately,
There can be
No other,
There can be
No you.

My heart rended,
Reason fails.
I hate you,
I love you,
I am not for you,
Nor you for me.
I shall never Recover.
Bane of my life,
Of my experience.
Consuming fire
Of my passion,
Of my soul!
Stirring feelings
No man
Ever touched.
Opposites,
Incompatible,
With no hope,
No illusions,
My heart
Beyond tomorrow,
Beyond forever,
Belongs to you.

"Ask the Vet"

With Becky Rhoades, DVM

Q: My cat keeps passing these small white worms in her stool, and they get stuck in her hair and on my furniture. What are they? Are they harmful to her?

A: It sounds like your cat is passing tapeworm segments; a small, flat segment resembles a grain of sand. A common tapeworm is Dipylidium caninum, a parasite which requires a flea as an intermediate host before it becomes infectious for cats and dogs. The animal becomes infected with tapeworms by eating a flea which is common skin parasite.

Signs of tapeworm infection include finding the small white segments in the feces, on the animal's hair around the anus, or attached to material where the animal sleeps. In addition, obvious signs of flea infestation will be evident. Most tapeworm infections are clinically asymptomatic, but rarely pets can develop gastrointestinal upsets. Tapeworms are commonly blamed for signs of 'scooting,' where an animals drags its rear end across the floor. More often, this symptom is due to other problems such as an anal sac infection.

If you pet has obvious signs of a tapeworm infection, there are several drug therapies available from your vet. The newest drugs, praziquantel (droncit), and epsiprantel (cestex), are 100% effective against tapeworms. Reinfection is common. Repetitive treatment with the above drugs is safe with most pets.

Rarely, humans have become infected with Dipylidium caninum because of accidental swallowing of an infected flea. These infections are not harmful to humans and are easily treated by a physician.

HORNER'S CORNER

[Yet another article in a series about get-rich-quick schemes.]

In the last few months, we've been considering—with editorial commentary by this writer, for better or for worse—a few of the scams, frauds, and assorted "get rich quick" schemes going around.

Taking the position that having one's own business is a good thing (if you so desire) in addition to a full-time job—at least at the start—how does one go about starting such a business assuming you don't happen to have $500,000 or so sitting in a cigar box waiting to be used to buy a McDonald's franchise?

Virtually all of the business opportunities you read about in the newspaper classifieds as being for sale require a substantial cash down payment with the seller sometimes agreeing to carry the rest of the note.

The idea, folks, is to make it a good deal for you, the buyer, and not to take some pig business off the hands of a seller drowning in a sea of red ink.

In analyzing a particular opportunity that's for sale, let's say you had $10,000 saved up to buy a business. You could get, say, 10% interest in a savings account or mutual fund. The question then becomes: How much MORE than $1000 per year could you make using this $10,000 to buy this business? Obviously, a business venture that would net you $1000 annually after all expenses and all your hard work isn't economically smart—you could get that from the bank in interest and do no work.

The other thing to consider is a basic break-even analysis. Let's say you're looking at a business that sells one product (we'll keep this simple for the example) with a fixed profit of $1.00 per unit.

First, you add up the annual business rent, utilities, advertising bills, phone bill, etc.—all the expenses you will encounter, including what you're going to have to pay on loans or seller carry-back notes to buy the business. Let's say this will total $70,000 per year. Basic break-even analysis tells us that dividing the expenses by the anticipated profit per unit sold, we would have to sell 70,000 units at $1.00 profit each to break even.

Now if the history of the business is annual sales of 40,000 units, you're upside down, pure and simple. You can't cover expenses with that sales volume.

Not wanting to work for free, if you decide you want to take out $12,000 a year from the business, you add that to the expenses above and do the same math. Now you need 82,000 units sold per year.

More realistically, you're not dealing with the sale of one product with a fixed profit—instead, various services/ products with different profits. In such a case, determine the average percentage profit margin (i.e. if the business has annual sales margin) and apply that to the expense figure to come up with a gross sales figure required to break even.

For example, with our business of $70,000 in annual expenses and you, the buyer, wanting $12,000 out of the business in your pocket annually, when looking at a business having a historical 25% profit margin, you take the $82,000 in expense figures, divide by 25% profit margin and you find you need to sell $328,000 worth of gross sales just to cover expenses. If the business historically has never done better

Man must be disappointed with the lesser things of life before he can comprehend the full value of the greater things of life. Because what we anticipate seldom occurs, what we least expect generally happens. Blessed is he who expects nothing, for he shall never be disappointed . . . Well, we certainly were not disappointed during the month of April. The hilite of the month was: Coronation—90. A job well done. To the new monarch, Vannah: You have your work cut out for you. Ralph & Ginger, your cavalcade of stars show was a hit . . . The Quilt Memorial was a moving experience for me . . . Now for the beautiful month of May. Joseph's Town & Country is opening a new cabaret lounge, Comedy Club. Coming there on May 25 is the San Fran improv group called Over Our Heads. Each of the players is vastly talented bringing a wealth of character to life . . . You have got to stop by the Buffalo Club; you will be beautifully surprised at what Shirley has done to it . . . Town House: The race is on trying to get a reservation for Sunday brunches. Remember, their restaurant is also open for the rest of the week . . . Terry Sidee, we love the new look in your video room at Faces . . . For all you sports fans, gay softball is in full swing. Check with your favorite bar for the schedule . . . Let's keep in mind that the Gay Games happen August 4th to 11th in Vancouver, Canada. Our Sacramento teams need lots of support. Let's give it.

than $250,000 per year, it either isn't worth what's being asked, the expenses are too high, the sales are too low, or other problems may be present. In other words, take a closer look before you leap.

Now the accountants out there will criticize this simple analysis as not taking into consideration tax benefits, cost of goods sold, etc.—which is exactly right. This is a basic thumbnail sketch that I use when a client wants to discuss whether to buy an existing business. It is a starting point only, and you should consult with a CPA and attorney before signing anything.

It doesn't hurt to talk to the existing business landlord, either. Believe me, when a business that is about to be evicted is up for sale, that fact has a big impact on my idea of the value of that business.

However, what about the case of the individual who works for someone else right now, who doesn't have $10,00 to $20,000 in a cigar box to use to buy a business, but does have the desire to set up a side business and perhaps eventually to do it full time. Is there hope for such individuals?

The answer is "yes." Actually, there are many such opportunities out there. I'll discuss some of the possibilities in later columns.

Next month: How to deal with a new car that's a lemon and how to get results fast, cheap, and usually without a lawyer.
